

PATIENT LEAFLET: The good relaxation guide

Dealing with physical tension

- Finding and dedicating time to relax is essential. Give relaxation some of your time, not just what's left over.
- Incorporate relaxing activities into your lifestyle. Do not rush tasks or try too hard to resolve issues.
- Adopt a relaxation routine, but do not expect to learn without practice.
- Relaxation routines are available (audio recordings) which help to relieve muscle tension and teach appropriate breathing exercises.
- Try not to worry about tension symptoms, such as aches, stiffness, increased heart rate, perspiration, stomach churning, etc.
- Keep fit and try adhering to a physical exercise regime. Regular brisk walks or swimming can help relieve tension.

Dealing with worry

- Accept that worrying is normal and on occasion it may be useful.
- Write down your concerns and decide which ones are more important using a rating system (i.e. marks out of ten).
- Work out a plan of action for each problem.
- Share your worries with friends, relatives or your GP, as they may provide helpful advice.
- Mentally repeating a comforting phrase may help block out worrying thoughts.
- Similarly, reading, crosswords, hobbies and interests may all help keep your mind active and positive.
- Enjoy quiet moments (e.g. sit and listen to relaxing music). Allow your mind to wander and try to picture yourself in pleasant situations.

Dealing with difficult situations

- Build your confidence by accepting and confronting circumstances that make you feel more anxious. Adopt a step-by-step approach to help face things and places which make you feel tense. Regular practice will help you overcome these issues.
- Write a plan and decide how you are going to deal with difficult situations.
- For further encouragement, reward yourself and share with others when you overcome difficult situations.
- As you face difficult situations your confidence will grow and your anxiety symptoms should become less troublesome.
- Everyone has good and bad days. Expect more good days as time goes on.
- Try to put together a programme incorporating all the elements presented in "The good relaxation guide" that meets the needs of your particular situation.
- Remember that expert guidance and advice is available if you need further help.
